Breaking the Silence

The New Zealand Herald is running an interesting series called Breaking the Silence, which is based around youth suicide and more recently self-harming. Earlier this year we were approached by the Herald to contribute to this series. We declined this offer as we were unsure of what exactly this series would contain and how they were going to portray any information we may have given them. As you may have read in some of the articles the current Ministry guidelines state that we, as teachers, should not speak about this topic. Students can bring the topic up, and if this comes up in our teaching resources such as books we can then discuss it. As a staff last year many of us trained in a course called Mental Health 101. This covered the subject of youth suicide and how to deal with young people who tell us they want to kill themselves or die. Yes, it happens at our school, and when the students have disclosed this information to us we have been able to use these tools and have found them useful.

In Class 9 Health recently we have been looking at support networks and who the students can go to for help in different scenarios. Sometimes that help can come from friends but due to life experience often it is better to get support from older people. As part of the Mates and Dates program, Class 8, 9, 10 and 11 have been participating in, students have also discussed where they can go to for help.

At school the students select a Mentor who they can go to at any time for extra support; they also have their sponsor teacher they can speak to. Maxine, our Counsellor, and Sandy, our School Nurse are also available. If you have concerns about your child please speak to their sponsor first and they will be able to help.

I encourage parents in the High School to talk to their children about this series and to highlight to their children where they can get help from. They might talk to you, but you could also point out that they can talk to others, such as aunties or uncles, grandparents, and their friend's parents. It might be worthwhile to talk to parents of your child's friends and just check in if you have worries, so you feel you are supported. I would like to think that my child's friend's parents were able to support my child if they came to them for help or to answer a question they might have. It does indeed take a community to raise and support a child.

Sports News

All 15 of our Taikura sports teams are heading into their last couple of weeks of winter sport, with many of these teams involved in finals matches I wish the teams well for these final games. We must all remember as parents, players and school staff to thank our coaches for the volunteer time they put into the teams.

Term 3 "One Off" sports events

This term we have many students participating in other interschool sports events;

- Class 6 and 7 students took part in the Town and Country schools football tournament held at Woodford House, we had 4 teams entered, everyone had a fantastic, fun and competitive day of football. Our Boys A grade team won the boys section of the tournament.

Update On Strategic Plan Process

Thank you to everyone who commented on the draft Strategic Plan 2018-2022. This week the working group is looking at all these suggestions and incorporating, amending and adjusting the plan where appropriate. The final plan will be delivered to the joint BOT/BOP meeting on 21 August. The working group is confident and proud of this plan as a reflection of the voices, wants and needs of our community. In delivering it to Monday's meeting we believe we are presenting a straightforward, plain speaking, accessible plan we all worked together to create.

Once the final plan is ratified by the Board our senior management team will begin preparing annual plans and budgets to reflect the actions identified in the strategic plan. Towards the end of 2017 we will begin the process of reviewing our existing plan: the Strategic Plan 2013-2017. This review process will be completed in 2018 and a report will then be available to the community.

Best regards on behalf of the BOT Strategic Plan Working Group, Jess Soutar Barron.

Music News

The Lower School Orchestra

We are excited to be looking at possible music for the end of the year and it is hoped some of the children who have been learning a year or more will be able to play with the orchestra. I am always keen to add a tailor-made part for each child, and with the support of our wonderful tutors it will be a very exciting and positive experience for the children.

Music Tutors at Taikura

We now have five children learning the cello with Hilary and there are more in the wings. I would love to see all our cellos being played.

The two guitar teachers Dan and Campbell teach Monday and Tuesday and have some vacancies. Vicki is here all day Thursday teaching the piano and Marian who began teaching here in 1969, teaches the violin and viola all day Monday. Our other tutors are Susan with flute on a Wednesday, Margot teaching voice on a Monday, and Callum teaching drums on a Friday. You would have heard Callum and Susan's fabulous playing in the school musical. They are both keen to have more students and are very passionate about playing and teaching. I have a list of all the teachers and their contact details, if you are interested.

Orchestra and Chamber Concerts

The last two chamber concerts for the year are next Thursday the 24 August and Thursday the 28 of September, where a group of Wind Instruments bring together European, African, Latin and American styles. Although these concerts are pre booked by 25 people, sometimes there is a spare seat and an extra student ticket only costs $5:00 if we run out of spares.

The last NZSO concert is on the 14 September at the Napier Municipal Theatre starting at 7pm. It features a wonderful pianist Freddy Kempf. He will play a movement from 6 different concertos. To ensure we get to sit at the front, I have just booked 40 tickets for students at $10 and some adults at $20. Please get permission forms from Frances and return ASAP and definitely by the 1 September.

Dear School Community

Thank you for giving our production of Joseph so much support both in the making and the attendance and appreciation. I just wanted to add a note on ticket prices as there were a number of people asking why the tickets were so expensive.

Every play that is still in copyright requires a license. Copyright usually lasts 70 years after the death of the Author, so any 20th or 21st Century play requires a license. Older plays can also require a license if they are newly translated or edited. Play licenses usually cost between $200 and $400 per performance and many of the plays we perform at Taikura require a licence.

Musicals are in another class of cost. The performing license usually costs $2,000, to $3,000 for three performances. Added to that are the cost of an orchestra, sound system, costumes, set etc When we produced "Oliver!" our last whole school musical about 9 years ago the actual cost of production was $6,000 which was almost exactly what we took at the door. The cafe turned this into a profit.

For Joseph we knew we needed an average ticket price of about $10:00 or $11:00 if we more or less filled each audience, and we wanted to keep the numbers simple so that is how we came to $15:00 for adults and $5:00 for students.

I had no intention of making a profit on the production but of being as sure as I could be that I wasn't going to make a loss because we would have had to find the money from somewhere. This is an attempt to explain why we charge tickets at all and why we decide on a particular ticket price.

Thanks again for your wonderful support.

David Urieli

Te Kakano Playgroup News

And the news is good news! The Taikura Kindergarten parent room has been the home for an active playgroup over the last three years. The playgroup is a place where parents and children come together and support one another through the challenging time of early childhood. The playgroup started at the Mangarau Kindergarten. When Mangarau Kindergarten closed the playgroup families were asked to find a new place. Initially it was Taruna Adult Education Centre, then our kindergartens took them under our wings. The Taikura Kindergarten parent room has been their temporary home since.

Yvonne Collins, the present leader of the playgroup, noted the growing number of families looking for a social place to be with their young children. So, a new and bigger home was sought and found -The Anthroposophical Centre / Rudolf Steiner House. Yvonne has been behind the scenes making this happen with the support of the kindergarten teachers and the Charitable Trust.

The playgroup at the Anthroposophical Centre / Rudolf Steiner House has opened its doors as from the 10 August. I had the pleasure of washing the windows and the doors and felt a sense of nurturing the "grand old Lady" (house), with my soapy water giving it a blessing. A father has been busy putting the necessary locks on the gates to protect the children. A mother arrived with a wholesome cake decorated with flower blossom. By the time I finished my small contribution I noticed the place was humming.

Thank you Yvonne and your helpers; may this grow and nurture our young children and families. The playgroup is a work in progress so watch this spot. Sandpit digging and placing a shed for tool storage is next on the agenda. Whenever you visit the playgroup, take time to read the notice board, posted with all the happenings at the Rudolf Steiner Centre on other days.

A roof for Kanukupolu School, Tonga

The need:

Kanukupolu is a Government Primary School in Tonga. The roof on the classroom block is in dire need of replacement. In a community with limited resources this is an enormous undertaking in terms of finances, skills and materials.

The project:

Flights for the building crew and accommodation in Tonga have already been kindly donated.

Now our aim is to raise enough funds to purchase the building materials needed to carry out this work.

Contact:
Esther Watson
estawatson8@gmail.com

The connection:

In 2017, a group of 35 students (with five adults) travelled to Tonga on a cultural and sporting exchange. During the week's visit they were warmly received and hosted by the local school: Kanukupolu. Although the visit was full of riches: friendships were made, laughter shared, cultures honoured our students could see how little the children had. Rather than set out to remedy this in little ways we have decided to try and do something big, lasting and of benefit to all the children, the teachers and the whole community that centres on Kanukupolu School.
